

Northwestern University
Department of Emergency Medicine

FULL TIME FACULTY OPENING

The Department of Emergency Medicine at Northwestern University's Feinberg School of Medicine is currently seeking a full-time academic emergency physician to pursue research interests in the provision of emergency care. The department is currently comprised of over 30 full-time academic faculty members with a range of research interests, including undergraduate/graduate medical education, health services, out-of-hospital care, communication, safety and operational sciences, cardiovascular disease, infection disease, thromboembolic disorders, and more.

Preference will be given to candidates with fellowship training or post-graduate work supporting a career in research, and a strong track record of research productivity and scholarship. Success in obtaining grant funding is strongly preferred as we are seeking a candidate that will help expand the department's grant portfolio.

This is a full-time faculty position in the clinician-educator track of the Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine. The candidate is required to be eligible to be appointed to the medical staff and work clinically in the Department of Emergency Medicine. The nominee will be eligible for an academic appointment at the rank of Professor, Associate Professor, and Assistant Professor commensurate with experience, training, and achievement. The department is well-equipped with collaborative academic support and grant writing resources. There is a competitive salary and comprehensive benefits package associated with the position.

The proposed start date is on or before July 1, 2016. In order to ensure full consideration, applications must be received prior to February 25, 2016. Send curriculum vitae referencing search #P-121N-16 to: tschmitz@nm.org
