

Medical Toxicologist, Emergency Medicine Faculty

Seeking a fellowship trained, board eligible/board certified medical toxicologist physician with a strong interest in education to assume the role of program director of the Medical Toxicology Fellowship Program. The fellowship program was established in 2011 and has a close working relationship with the Upstate New York Poison Center. The program has graduated one fellow. Academic responsibilities include participation in teaching, conferences and research within the Medical Toxicology section of the Department of Emergency Medicine. Clinical responsibilities include direct patient care in the Emergency Department, toxicology consultations to inpatient services and staffing of Medical Toxicology Clinic. Administrative responsibilities as program director include ensuring the program meets all requirements of the ACGME. EM offers an excellent compensation and benefit package, including relocation expenses. Qualified candidates are invited to send a signed letter of interest, CV, and contact information for three references to:
